GENERAL INDEX.

VOL. XXIV. NEW SERIES.

Airs, popular national, remarks on the profane tendency of accommodating sacred words to them, 122; instances referred to, 123.

Ambassador, the late Persian, to England, his contemptible character and base conduct, 426, 7.

Amman, the ancient Philadelphia, 143.

Amulet, the, or Christian remembrancer, 552, et seq.; nature of the work, 552; contributors, 553; the trumpet, by Mrs. Hemans, 554.

Anab, conjectured to be the place where the Jewish spies obtained the grapes, 142, 3.

Anderson, Christopher, extract from his discourse on the Christian spirit which is essential to the triumph of the Kingdom of God, 351, et seq.

————'s memoirs of Catherine Brown, a Christian Indian of the Cherokee nation, 178, et seq.; her birth and education, 179; her moral character irreproachable amidst great temptation, 179, 80; was the first Indian baptized by the missionaries of the American board, 180; advantages possessed by the preacher of the Gospel among the Indians of North America, ib.

Andes, dangers attendant on crossing them, 36; fatal disasters that befell a detachment of the patriot army of Columbia in their route over them, 37, et seq.

Antoura, protestant institution there, 301.

Apocrypha, controversy respecting the, 185, et seq.; Mr. Douglas on the service done to religion by the Bible Society, 185, 6; the present controversy honourable to both parties, 186; statement of the question, 187; charge of the Edinburgh committee against the Parent committee, ib.; objections of Mr. Gorham, ib.; list of foreign churches whose influence would be affected by refusing to circulate the Apocrypha, 187, 8; real nature of the question, 188; remarks on the two different modes of binding up the apocryphal books with the canonical scriptures, ib. et seq.; Dr. Lightfoot, on the Papists' inserting of the apocrypha between Malachi and Matthew, 190, note; the canon of scripture not an article of faith, 192; the import of the term canonical disputed, ib.; Mr. Gorham on the fundamental principle of the Bible Society, 193, 4; strictures on his remarks, 194; the agreement respecting the canon a term of union considered, 195; extracts from Mr. Venn's pamphlet, in reference to omitting to print the apocrypha, 195, et seq.; remarks on the views and practice of the English church in reference to the Apocrypha, 197, 8; M. Monod on the real situation of the Paris Bible Society, 198, 9; charge of the Edinburgh Bible Society, and of Mr. Gorham, that the fundamental law of the Bible Society prohibits the circulation of the apocryphal writings, considered, 199; remarks on the resolution of the Bible Society passed in Aug. 1822, 201, 2; difference between Mr. Gorham and the Edinburgh Society in reference to the plan to be adopted in future, 202; Mr. Gorham cautions the Society against being too much elated by their success, &c., 203, 4; fourth resolution of the Edinburgh Bible Society, 204, 5; remarks upon its indiscriminate reprobation of the apocryphal writings, ib.; and on the charge of fraud, by sanctioning the circulation of the apocrypha, 207; strictures on the conduct of the Edinburgh committee, 208; necessity of a definite rule for future practice, 210; declaration of the survivers of those who framed the rules, respecting their intended applications to the apocrypha, 378; the question of the lawfulness of circulating the apocrypha considered, 379, et seq.; the canon of scripture comes within the range of human opinion, 381; misrepresentation of Mr. Gorham, ib.; the divine authority of any particular book of scripture cannot be a matter of faith, 382; Dr. Marsh on the testimony borne by our Lord to the books of the Old Testament, ib.; on the Jewish mode of dividing the Hebrew Bible, 382, 3; his proof that the apocrypha could not have been contained in their Hebrew Bible, 383; question whether our Lord designated a class of writings under the name of the Psalms, ib.; the classing together as one book, called the book of the Psalms, the writings of Solomon, Ezra, and the authors of the Chronicles, not warranted by authority, 384; the inspiration of the book of Daniel cannot be doubted by Christians, 385; Bishop Marsh on the probable reason of the Jews for excluding the book of Daniel from their Hebrew prophetical scriptures, ib.; remarks of the Rev. Hartwell Horne on the inspiration of the Old Testament, 386, et seq.; four criteria of inspiration, as attaching to the books of the Old Testament, 388, et seq.; application of these criteria to the writings of Solomon, Ezra, and the Chronicles, 390; their application to the apocryphal books, 391; the different degrees of canonicity of the Romish writers, ib.; the canonicity of the church of England, 392; its application to the writings of Solomon and Ezra, the book of Esther and the Chronicles, 392; Bishop Marsh on the claims of the books pronounced canonical by the Council of Trent, 392, 3; catalogue of the apocryphal books declared canonical by the third Council of Carthage, ib.; no books pronounced to be canonical by the Council of Trent, but what had existed from the earliest ages of Christianity, ib.; cause of the agreement between the Latin and Greek versions of the Old Testament, ib.; the Greek Bible adopted as a kind of original by the early Latin church, 393, 4; all the books of the Latin version considered canonical by St. Augustine, of Hippo, 394; the new Latin translation of the Old Testament published by Jerome in the fifth century, ib.; Jerome's translation being made from the Hebrew Original caused the difference between the Latin and the Hebrew canon to become generally known, ib.; Jerome's opinion of the canon of scripture not adopted by the church of Rome, 395; the Council of Trent decides in favour of the canon of Augustine in preference to that of Jerome, ib.; extent of the demand made on the continental churches, by requiring a practical agreement respecting the canon, as the terms of co-operation in circulating the scriptures, ib.; the question whether it be necessary to circulate the apocrypha with the canonical scriptures considered, 396; the assertion of the 'Vindicator,' that the people of Roman Catholic countries have no objection to Protestant Bibles, examined, ib.; remarks on the case of the Russian Bible Society, 397; the case of Leander Van Ess, 398; his pathetic appeal to the Committee of the Bible Society, ib.; question of the expediency of circulating the Apocryha, &c. 399; the proposed middle course considered, 400; mode by which the great object of the Society may be effectually promoted, 402; the case of new translations considered, 403; remarks of Mr. Jowett on the maintenance of a pure text, 403, 4; concluding observations, 404, et seq.

Appendix to the report of the trial of Lieutenant Dawson, &c. 1, et seq.

Arabia, Major Price's essay towards the history of, &c. 440, et seq.; the Arabians of the Old Testament, 440; the Saracens of the Greeks and Romans, 441; Arabia of the New Testament, ib.; and of ecclesiastical history, ib.; the Sheba of Scripture, ib.; Horace's notice of the kings of Sabæa, ib.; the chronicle of Abi Jauffer Mahommed, the origin of the present essay, 442; the chronicler's detail of the antidiluvian history, ib.; his post-diluvian history of Arabia, 443; the paradise of Irem, ib.; Arabia received settlers from Syria, 443, 4; history of Zohauk, the Assyrian Nimrod, 444; the present Arabians descended from two stocks, 445; kingdom of the Hamyarites, 446; Hareth ul Rayesh, the founder of the first Arabian monarchy, ib.; his successors, ib.; Balkeis, queen of Sheba, 447; hostile expedition of Naush towards the west stopped by drifting sands, 448; reign of Abu Kerret, ib.; his successful expedition into China, 449, 50; narrative from the Tarikh Tebry, respecting the remnant of the Jews, after the first destruction of Jerusalem, 451, 2; second destruction of the city by Bakhtunnuser, ib.; history of Ahatoutous, or Ahasuerus, and Ayuer, or Esther, 453, 4; destruction of Saba, afterwards Mareb, 455; conquests of Ælius Gallus, the Roman general in Arabia, and fall of the Sabean monarchy of Yemen, 456.

INDEX.

Arab tribes, Buckingham's travels among them, 138, et seq.

Aristocracy of Britain, a political and moral phenomenon, cause of it, 247.

Atchison, Captain, dismissed from his Majesty's service, cause of it, 1, et seq.; see Lieut. Dawson.

Aurora islands, their position as determined by the Spaniards incorrect, 171, 2.

Austrians, character of, 243; Austrian police, 244.

Baptist mission in India, 482, et seq.; extract from a letter written by a popish priest at Carlow, to Dr. Singer, of Trinity college, declaring the total failure of the Bible society, and denouncing the missionaries as deceivers and robbers of the public, 482, 3; the malignant calumnies of the Romish Priest, the Abbé Dubois, founded on information supplied by Unitarian coadjutors, 483; total ignorance of the Abbé, in regard to the Bengal missions, 484; source of the information on which he grounds his calumnious misrepresentations, ib.; prediction of Mr. Fox, that, but for the interference of the Unitarians, the Bible will become the 'Joe Miller of India,' 485; the materials of Mr. Fox's false accusations admitted to have been supplied by Mr. Wm. Adam, formerly a Baptist missionary, but now a Unitarian minister at Calcutta, ib.; prodigious increase of Unitarianism at Calcutta, since Mr. Adam quitted the Baptist mission and preached Unitarian doctrines, ib.; queries of Dr. Ware, and replies of Mr. Adam, ib., et seq.; mistatements into which Mr. Adam had the misfortune to fall, 488; his representations of the plan followed at Serampore in translating the Scriptures grossly incorrect, ib.; Mr. Fox's improvement upon Mr. Adam's misrepresentation, 490; remarks of the missionaries on their first versions, and their public appeal for corrections, &c., 490, 1; remarks on Mr. Fox's attempt to place Dr. Carey and his labours in a ridiculous light, 491; the actual fact in regard to the versions of the New Testament, ib. et seq.; Mr. Adam's opinion that the Kunkun language does not exist, 493; the locality of this dialect, 494, note; testimonies of the excellence of the Kunkun version, ib.; Mr. Fox's insinuations tending to invalidate these testimonies considered, 494, 5; Mr. Adam's direct attacks on the Serampore translations examined and exposed, 499, et seq.; his sweeping condemnation of the missionaries' tracts, 501, et seq.; extract from a tract by Messrs. Yates, and Eustace Carey, 502, note; standing proofs of the efficiency of some of the tracts, 504; Mr. Adam's misstatements, &c. respecting the dissemination of christianity in India by preaching, 504, 5; his admission that the missionaries have been instrumental in spreading general information throughout Bengal, 505; Mr. Adam and the popish priest on the number of conversions, 506; statement of Mr. Ward in his Farewell Letter, 507; Mr. A.'s admission of the superiority of the native converts to their idolatrous countrymen, 507; his remarks on the progress and prospects of unitarianism in India considered, 508; his observations on the unitarian Hindoos, 508, 9; his hopes rest chiefly on the Mussulman population of India, 509; thinks Persia a promising sphere, the inhabitants being all Mussulmans, ib.

Bayley, Solomon, remarkable incidents in the life of, 94, et seq.; the author born a slave, ib.; interesting account of the release of his wife from slavery, 95.

Bishop of Gloucester's sermon before the incorporated society for the propagation of the Gospel in foreign parts, &c. low state of the funds of the society, 557, et seq.; two thirds nearly of the annual payment a grant from parliament, 558; distribution of the funds, 558, 9; this society appears to be a society for the propagation of episcopacy, 559; extracts, ib.; the abstract of the society's proceedings, 560; the Rev. G. Costar's statement of his labours in the Bermudas, 561; right of the Crown to nominate missionaries, 561, 2; detached extracts, 562; the children of Baptists taught that they receive their names from their godfathers and their godmothers, ib.; the protestant university of Debritzen, in Hungary, 563; remarks on the Bishop's sermon, ib. et seq.

INDEX.

Blood, colour of it, 115, 16, et seq.; Brande on the red particles of it, 212; average quantity of in the human body, ib.; its different nature in different species of animals, 213; is the source of health and of disease, ib.

Bochara, its present state, population, &c., 437.

Bolivar, character of, 46.

Bosra, ruins at, 145; Roman theatre, 146.

Bowring's ancient poetry and romances of Spain, 259, et seq.; Spain moulded by its popular poetry, 260; the sixteenth century its poetical age, ib.; romance the beginning of its poetry, ib.; the popular poetry of Spain truly national, 261; is tinctured with religious devotion, 262; ''Tis time to rise, a poem, ib.; 'Come, wandering Sheep,' 263; the 'Night of Marvels,' by a Lusitanian poet, ib.; 'Soul and Sense,' 264; sonnet, ib.; ode, by Fray Luis de Leon, 265, 6.

Brain, the, size, nerves of, &c., 219.

Brown, Catherine, a christian Indian of the Cherokee nation, Anderson's memoirs of, 178, et seq

Buckingham's travels among the Arab tribes of East Syria and Palestine, &c., 138, et seq.; base proceedings of certain writers of the Quarterly Review, 138, 9; route of the author, 139; ruins of Amatha, ib.; Djebel Osha imagined to be Mount Nebo, ib.; tomb of Joshua, &c., 139, 40; the town of Szalt, 140; its population, &c., ib; character and costume of the inhabitants, ib.; description of the Greek church, its service, priest's dress, &c., 141, 2; Anab conjectured to be the place where the Jewish spies obtained the grapes, 142, 3; ruins of Amman, the ancient Philadelphia, 143; Om el Reszasz, ib.; ruins of Heshbon, 144; fish-pools of Solomon, 144; ruins at Bosra, in the Haouran, 145; Roman theatre, 146; desolate state of the country, and long extent of ruined towns, 147; Soueda, the capital of the East Druses, 148; Gunnawat, its ruins, temple, theatre, &c., ib.; and remarks on the Druses, their towns, &c., 149; the town of Ezra, 150, 1; inaccuracy of Volney's topographical descriptions, 152.

Caravanserai, the saffron, legend of, 432; its great dimensions, ib.; singular adventure connected with it, 432, 3.

Carey's Latin versification simplified, &c., 470.

Cargueros, or men of burden, in Columbia, &c., their wretched life, 40; dangers attendant on this mode of travelling, 41.

Cefalonia, Colonel Napier's memoir on the roads of, 294, et seq.

Ceremonies, popish, in Malta, Corfu, and the Mauritius, services required of the British troops and officers in aid of them, 9.

Chili, journal of a residence in, &c., 406, et seq.; detail of the various revolutionary proceedings in Chili, 407, 8; unsuccessful attempts of the Carreras in favour of independency, 407, et seq.; successes of the royalists under Osorio, 408; their defeat by the Buenos Ayres troops, 409; fate of the Carrera family, 409, 10; bay of Talcahuano, ib.; unsuccessful attack on the town of Conception, 411; the society, manners, &c. of Talcahuano, 411, 12; Conception, its population, &c., ib.; defeat of the royalists at Talcahuano, 412, 13; disturbed and dangerous state of the province of Conception, 415; the author's disastrous situation, 415, 16; final defeat of the royalists, 416, 17; subsequent proceedings of the Chilian authorities, 417, 18.

Chippeway, Indian, specimens of the wild oratory of one, 184.

Christianity, Maria Hack's familiar illustrations of the principal evidences and design of, 173, et seq.

——————— prospects of, in India, correspondence relative to it, 482, et seq.

Columbia, 27, et seq.; appropriateness of the name, 27; the people of the United American States have no appropriate national designation, ib.; the country, now called Columbia, neglected by its mother country, 28; abounds with savage Indians, ib.; is without roads, ib.; its population low, ib.; its imports, exports, revenues, &c., ib.; proceedings and financial difficulties of the new government, 28, 9; Colonel Hall's statement of the difficulties that fetter the commerce of Columbia, 29; great want of capital, ib.; enterprises undertaken by English capitalists, 30; the monopoly of the pearl fisheries assigned to Messrs. Rundell and Bridge, ib. note; a patent to establish steam-boats on the Orinoco granted to Colonel Hamilton, &c., ib.; Columbia not an eligible country for English agriculturists, 31; ascendency of British influence, ib.; jealousy and mis-statements of M. Mollien on this subject, 31, et seq.; route of Captain Cochrane, 33, 4; design and value of Colonel Hall's 'Columbia,' 34; route of M. Mollien, ib.; character of his work, ib; notice of his former travels in West Africa, ib.; Captain Cochrane's directions for travelling in this country, 35; melancholy picture of the banks of the Magdalena, 36; dangers from crossing the Andes, ib.; Captain Cochrane's description of the disastrous passage of the Andes by a division of the patriot army, 37, et seq.; appalling passage of the paramo of Cerradera, 39; passage of the Quindiu, ib.; Captain Cochrane's account of his journey over it, 39, 40; cruelty and deserved fate of a Spanish officer, 40; wretched life of the cargueros or men of burden, ib.; predilection of the robust young men for this mode of life, ib.; dangers attending this mode of travelling, 41; character of the Columbians, by M. Mollien, 41, 2; his portraits of the military leaders, Bolivar, &c., 42, et seq.; remarks on Mr. Hippisley's character of Bolivar, 46; the probable stability of the present form of government considered, 48; the present aspect of the government, 49; advantage to the country from the abolition of slavery, ib.; testimony of Humboldt in favour of free labour, 50; suppression of the smaller monastic establishments in Columbia, ib.

INDEX.

'Columbus, the first discovery of,' a song, 170.

Conception, the town of, its population, &c., 411, 12.

Cochrane's, Captain, journal of a residence and travels in Columbia, during the years 1823 and 1824, 27; see Columbia.

Confession, auricular, remarks on, 325.

Correspondence relative to the prospects of Christianity, &c. in India, 482, et seq.

Costello's, Louisa Stuart, songs of a stranger, 168, et seq.; the spirit's song, 168, 9; to my mother, 169; the first discovery of Columbus, 170; Colabak, the camel seeker, 170, et seq.

Cracow, its wretched state, 240, 1.

Craig's translation of Pascal's thoughts on religion, &c. 528, et seq.; criticism of Voltaire on the 'Provinciale,' 528, 9; Pascal's triumphant defence against the charge of unfaithful citation, 529; character of the 'Pensées,' 529; admirable work of the Abbé Guenée, entitled, Letters of certain Portuguese Jews to M. de Voltaire, 530; excellent remarks of the author on the degrading influence of the popish superstition, 531; appeal to the protestant population of Britain, to make exertions in aid of their popish brethren, ib.

Crayon's, Geoffrey, tales of a traveller, 65, et seq.; character of the present tales, 65; the author's statement of his plan, 66, 7; extract from the bold dragoon, 67, 8; Wolfgang, 69, et seq.; portrait of the captain of banditti, 72; manners, &c. of the banditti of Abruzzi, 72, et seq.

Dawson, Lieut. George Francis, proceedings of a general court martial held at Malta respecting his conduct, 1, et seq.; peculiar claim of the present case to public attention, 1; remarks occasioned by the ex parte statement of the present affair in the public papers, 2; extract from Lieut. Dawson's letter to the bishops, in justification of his conduct, 3, 4; proceedings on the festival of the image of St. Lorenzo, ib.; conduct of Captain Atchison, 4; procrastination of the inquiry into the conduct of Lieut. Dawson and Captain Atchison, 5; conduct of the Duke of Wellington, 6; unjust act of Sir Thomas Maitland, ib.; the president of the court martial a Roman catholic and foreigner, 7; Lieut. D. compelled to decline making his defence, ib.; appeals from the decision of the court, ib.; the court martial severely censured, and ordered to re-assemble, and consider his defence, ib.; its mitigated sentence, ib.; remarks on the position of his Majesty's advisers, that 'orders issued by authorities legally constituted, are lawful,' 7, 8; defence of the order, for disobeying which the two officers were cashiered, 8, 9; nature of the service required of the British officers and troops, at the popish ceremonies in Corfu, Malta, and the Mauritius, 9; remarks on the proceedings against the two officers, 9, et seq.; noble conduct of

INDEX.

Marcellus, the centurion, and Cassianus, 11; general interest excited in favour of the two British officers, 12.

Death of the first-born, in Egypt, meditation on, 62, et seq.

Dewint's and Hughes's views in Provence, and on the Rhone, 519, et seq.

Diseases termed nervous, the most frequent in modern times, 100.

Dove Dale, a favourite resort of Rousseau, 89

Druses, origin, religious tenets, &c. of, 303, et seq.

——— their principal towns, &c. 148, et seq.

Edinburgh Bible Society, vindication of its proceedings relative to the Apocrypha, &c., 377, et seq.

——————— statement of the committee of, relative to the circulation of the Apocrypha, &c., 185, et seq.

East's sabbath harp, 354, et seq.

Engraving, present state of the art, 519, et seq.; the order in which invention has travelled through the different forms and stages of art, 519; probable origin of sculpture, ib.; of painting, 520; engraving not discovered by the ancients, ib.; claims of Finiguerra to its invention, 520, 1; high merits of some modern engravers, 521; superior skill of Sharp, 522; skill in the principles and practice of design, too frequently neglected by the engraver, ib; system to be pursued in the education of a youth possessed of real feeling for art, 523; state of the English school of engraving, prior to and during the eighteenth century, 524; state of the art in France and Germany, ib.; present state of the English school, ib.; character of 'Turner's rivers of England,' 526; 'William's select views in Greece,' ib.; 'illustrations of Warwickshire,' 526; 'views in Provence,' ib.; 'Martin's illustrations of Milton,' 527; notice of some other works, ib.

Essays and letters, by John Kitto, 273, et pl.

Ess, Leander Van, his extensive circulation of the scriptures, 327.

Fever, its nature, &c., 214, et seq.

Fisheries, pearl, of Columbia, monopoly of, assigned to Messrs. Rundell and Bridge, 30, note.

Fletcher's discourse on the principles and tendencies of congregational nonconformity, 363, et seq.; to be a dissenter not a desirable thing, 364; the principles treated of in the present discourse, ib.; the principles of nonconformity identical with those of protestantism, ib.; remarks on the state of discipline in dissenting churches, 365, 6.

France, Normandy excepted, the most unpicturesque country of Europe, 227.

Fraser's narrative of a journey into Khorasan, 418, et seq.

Gainsborough's studies of figures, 519, et seq.

Galt's fictions of Scottish life, remarks on them, 15.

Germany, Russell's tour in, 227, et seq.; France, with the exception of Normandy, the most unpicturesque country in Europe, 227; the author's route, 228; German and French cookery, ib.; M. de Stael's description of Weimar, 229; state of society at, ib.; character of the grand duke, 230; notice of Wieland, 230, 1; of Göethe, 231, et seq.; his novels, 233, 4; character and conduct of the grand duchess, 234; her interview with, and dignified conduct towards Bonaparte, 234, 5; atrocities of the Russians and Austrians, 235; admirable conduct of the ducal family, 235, 6; university of Jena, 236; total absence of discipline among the students, ib.; their character and conduct, under the name of Burschen, ib. et seq.; their secret societies as landsmannschaften, 238, 9; opposed by the government, and their cautious conduct, ib.; wretched state of Cracow, 240, 1; depraved morals of the Viennese, 241, 2; political character of their public men, 242; pilgrimage to Mariazell, 242, 3; character of the Austrians, 243; Austrian police, 244; system of espionage, 244, 5; portraiture of Prince Metternich, 245, 6; the aristocracy of Britain a political and moral phenomenon, its causes, 247.

Gilbert's memoir of the life and writings of Dr. Williams, 281, et seq.; sketch of the life of Dr. Williams, ib.; he enters the school at St. Asaph, 282; acquires a distaste to become a clergyman and quits the school, 282, 3; exercise of his mind under religious impressions, 283, 4; is placed under the tuition of a clergyman, with a view to entering into the ministry of the established church, 284, 5; renounces his intention on seeing the profaneness of some candidates for the holy office, 285: enters the dissenters' academy at Abergavenny, 286; extracts from his diary about this time, 286, et seq.; becomes tutor to some young men destined for the Christian ministry, 289; judicious advice of Dr. Davies, 290; list of his various works, 291; removes to Birmingham, and afterwards to Rotherham, ib.; publishes his essay on the equity of Divine government, &c. 291, 2; the author's delineation of the character of Dr. Williams, 292, et seq.

INDEX.

Goldsmith's, Oliver, rising village, a poem, 268, et seq.; letter from another Oliver Goldsmith, to another Henry Goldsmith, 268; extract from the poem, ib. et seq.; Bishop of Nova Scotia's notice of the Author and his poem, 270.

Good's, John Mason, study of medicine, 97, et seq.

Gorham on the apocryphal controversy, 377, et seq.; see Guardian Christian, and Apocrypha.

Gorham's statement, &c. on the impropriety of circulating the apocryphal books, indiscriminately intermixed with the sacred writings, 185, et seq.

Goëthe, notice of; his novels, &c. 231, et seq.

Graphic illustrations of Warwickshire, 519, et seq.

Greece, Williams's select views in, 519, et seq.

Groser's six lectures on Popery, 322, et seq.; subjects of the lectures, 324; remarks on the declared insufficiency of the Scriptures, ib.; pope John XXII. threatened to be burned as a heretic, ib.; note; auricular confession considered, 325; on the assumed authority of the pope, in regard to penance, excommunication, &c. 325, 6; all the adherents of popery do not participate in its spirit, 326, et seq.; extensive circulation of the bible, and of his own translation of the new testament, by Leander Van Ess, 326, et seq.

Guardian, Christian, on the apocryphal controversy, 377, et seq.

Hack's, Maria, familiar illustrations of the principal evidences and design of Christianity, 173, et seq.; the author's statement of the design of her work, 174, 5; its contents, 175; illustrative extract, exhibiting both a medium and a model of admirable religious instruction, 175, et seq.

Hall's, Colonel, Columbia, its present state, 27.

Hall's sermon on the death of Dr. Ryland, 511, et seq.; the charge that the gospel neglects to cultivate friendship considered, 511, 12; specimen of a spiritual friendship in the beloved disciple and his Lord, 512, 13, 14; peculiar privileges of the Evangelist after the resurrection, 514; sketch of the character of Dr. Ryland, 515, 16; his early connexion with the Baptist missionary society, 516, 17; joys occasioned by the consideration of the reunion of the just in a future state, 517, 18.

Harmony, the late purchase of Mr. Owen, of Lanark, in North America, description of the town, grounds, granaries, &c. &c. 477, et seq.

Harp, the Sabbath, by the Rev. J. East, 354, et seq.

Heraclea, description of the valley of, in the island of Cefalonia, 295, 6; fine view from the neighbouring summits, ib.

Heshbon, ruins of, 144.

Holiness, personal, March's importance of to the Christian minister, 555, et seq.

Holman's travels through Russia, Siberia, &c., while suffering total blindness, 532, et seq.

Il Pastore Incantato, a drama, Pompeii, and other poems, 164, et seq.; origin and dramatis personæ of the 'Enchanted Shepherd,' 165; soliloquy of the guardian spirit, 165, 6; plot of the drama, 167.

Indians, North American, advantages possessed by the preacher of the Gospel among them, 180.

Irving's orations for missionaries after the apostolic school, 343, et seq.; the apostolic and the modern missionary placed in very different circumstances, 344; Mr. Irving's remarks on prudence as a Christian qualification, ib.; drift of the Author's orations, 346; his attack on the character of the missionaries, ib.; reply of Mr. Orme, 346, 7; his interpretation of the scriptural expression 'the 'Son of peace,' 348; requisite qualification to the office of an apostle, 349; extract from Mr. C. Anderson's discourse on the Christian spirit essential to the triumph of the kingdom of God, 351, et seq.

INDEX.

Jena, university of, 236; dissolute character of the students under the name of Burschen, ib. et seq.; the landsmannschaften, their secret societies, &c., 238, 9.

Jerusalem delivered, Tasso's, Wiffin's translation of, 456, et seq.

Jerusalem, Moore's poem on the destruction of, 362.

Jerusalem, Strauss's Helon's pilgrimage to, 153, et seq.; purport of the work, ib.; detail of the plan, 153, 4; Helon is early taught to reverence Jerusalem, 155, 6; historical sketch of the rise of the kingdom of Judah, 156, 7; Helon's first visit to the holy land, 157, 8; ceremony of the wave sheaf, 159; his examination before the Sanhedrim, on devoting himself to the sacerdotal office, 160; is invested with the sacerdotal robes, 161; detail of the official services of the priests and Levites in the temple, 161, 2; the ninety-second psalm, 163.

John XXII., pope, threatened to be burned as a heretic, 324; note.

Jones's, Dr. history of Wales, 90, et seq.

Journal of a residence in Chili, 406, et seq.

Jowett's Christian researches in Syria and the Holy Land, &c., 298, et seq.; paramount claims of Syria to the attention of Christian missionaries, 298; peculiar difficulty of a Christian missionary in Syria, 300; protestant England has not a protestant government, ib.; note; the author's arrival off the coast of Saide, ib.; sees the country lighted up with fires, on the eve of the festival of the holy cross, ib.; he lands at Beirout, and meets Messrs. Fisk and Lewis, 301; protestant institution at Antoura, ib.; missionaries assembled there, ib.; its numerous convents, &c., ib.; the Author visits the nunnery, 302; is introduced to the prince of the Druses, ib.; M. Gandolfi's account of the conduct of the Druses on becoming initiated, 303; Author's remarks on it, ib.; origin and religious tenets of the Druses, ib. et seq.; sect of the Ansairies, 305; Gibbon's account of them, 306, 7; notices of them by Burckhardt and Niebuhr, 308; question how far the Druses may resemble the Wahhabees, ib.; the Author visits the convent of Yhzumar, 309; his interview and conversation with the Greek procurator, 310; remarks on the present state of Greece, ib.; Beirout, Aleppo, Jerusalem, the central stations of the Syrian Roman Catholic missions, in a state of decay, 311; present state of Saide (Sidon), 312; old Tyre, ib.; its ruins, &c., ib.; the Author preaches at Acre, 313; its population, ib.; state of the Latin convent, and of the popish mission, 313, 14; remarks on the site of the mountain of precipitation, 314; mount of the beatitudes, ib.; the Author's feelings on the first view of Jerusalem, 315; his reflections respecting visiting what are called the holy places, 315, 16; and on the tendency of a pilgrimage to the holy city, 316, 17; wretched state of the Christians, at the time of his visit, 317; probable advantage that would be gained by the utter abandonment of Jerusalem by the Christians, 378, 9; reflections on the restoration of the Jews to the land of their fathers, 379, 80.

Key to Dr. Carey's Latin versification simplified, 470.

Khorasan and Turcomania, travels in by J. B. Fraser and M. N. Mouravier, 418, et seq.; valuable researches of Mr. Elphinstone and Mr. Moorcroft, 418; object, &c. of Mr. Fraser, 419; his correction of the positions of some principal places in Persia, ib.; dangers of his voyage from Bombay to the Persian gulf, 420; fatal effects of the epidemic of Sheerauz, 421, 2; he joins Mr. Rich and Dr. Jukes, at Sheerauz, 422; death of Mr. Rich by the epidemic, 423; specimen of Persian falsehood, 423, 4; death of Dr. Jukes, 424; Mr. F. assumes his diplomatic character, to secure his papers, &c. ib.; rapacity of the the Persians, ib.; hazardous visit to the tomb of Fatima, ib.; arrives at Tehran, 425; death and excellent character of the Shah's eldest son, ib.; proof of his admirable address, ib.; great abilities of Meerza Abdool Wahab, secretary for foreign affairs, ib.; contemptible character and base conduct of Meerza Abool Hussein Khan, late ambassador to England, 426,

7; Futch Allee Khan, poet laureate of Persia, 427; base character of the king, 427, 8; amusing instance of self-inflicted torture, 428; suspected assassination of Mr. Browne by the express order of the king, ib.; Mr. F. quits Tehran as a travelling merchant, ib.; state of Semnoon and Damghan, 429; unpleasant adventure at the village of Meyomeid, 429, 30; remarkable instance of the spirit of clanship in the east, 431; revenge generally the measure of punishment in Persia, ib. note; legend of the Saffron caravanserai, 432; curious adventure there, 432, 3; Nishapore, its various vicissitudes and present state, 433; Mushed, capital of Persian Khorasan, ib.; the Author's hazardous visit to the mausoleum of Imaun Reza, 435, 6; his critical situation at Mushed, present state of Bockhara, its reigning sovereign, population, &c., 437; kingdom of Kokaun, ib.; present state of the former powerful empire of Khauresin, ib.; real object of the embassy of M. Mouravier to Khiva, ib.; his account of the dried channel of the Oxus, 438, 9.

Kitto's essays and letters, 275, et seq.; sketch of his early life, education, &c. 276; is engaged to write in the Plymouth journal, 277; his account of his deafness, 277, 8; fears he is becoming dumb, 278.

Krimea, present state of, 549.

Leaders, military, of the Columbian revolution, portraits of, 42, et seq.

Letter, expostulary, to the Rev. E. Irving, by W. Orme, 343, et seq.

Letters written from Columbia in 1823, 27.

Life of Friedrich Schiller, 248, et seq.

Lyall's Character of the Russians, &c. 532, et seq.

——— travels in Russia, the Krimea, &c. 532, et seq.

Magdalena river, melancholy picture of its banks, 36.

Majendie, M. high importance of his recent experiments, 112.

Man responsible for his belief, a sermon by Dr. Wardlaw, 566.

Manual for church-members, by Dr. Newman, 550, et seq.

Marcellus, the centurion, his noble conduct and martyrdom, 11.

March's importance of eminent personal holiness to the Christian minister, 554, et seq.; on happiness, 555; personal holiness in the Christian minister necessary to a well-grounded assurance of the divine approbation, 555, 6.

Martin's illustrations of 'Paradise Lost,' 519, et seq.

Mausoleum of Imaum Reza, description of it, 435, 6.

Medicine, study of, by J. M. Good, 97, et seq.; design of the work, 97; reply to the question, Is there any reality in medicine? 98; indications of a hostile feeling in professors towards their own vocation, ib.; the art of medicine entitled to the confidence and gratitude of the public, 99; the nugatory nature of medicine not to be assumed from the continuance of disease, ib.; the diseases termed nervous, the most frequent in modern times, 100; causes of the lessened sickness and mortality of the times, ib.; table of the law of mortality at two different periods, 101, note; inference of the available influence of remedial attempts to shorten the duration of fever, 101; proof from the Author's description of the spasmodic cholera of India, 103; and by reference to the works of Hippocrates, ib.; question respecting the influence of medical doctrines upon medical practice, 104; proof of the great sacrifice of human life to false theory, ib.; different practice of the French and of the English physicians, 105; variety of opinions prevalent among our own speculatists, ib.; probable cause of the great improvement of practical medicine in the present day, 105; reasons for objecting to the Author's classification and nomenclature of disease, 106, 7; mode of defining and designating without the aid of an artificial system, 108; certain proposals of the Author highly worthy of attention, ib.; objections to a merely analytical and topographical method of cultivating the art, 109; the question of unprofessional medicine considered, ib.; the bent to be given to unprofessional inquiries, ib.; probable advantage from unprofessional inquiry, in effectually undermining quackery, 110; Mr. Moore on the proclaimed virtues of nostrums, and on lists of cases, 110, 11; an insuperable objection to the Author's plan stated, 111; high merit of the prefatory essays, 112; his arrangement of the functions, ib.; azote necessary to deriving nutriment from aliment, ib.; importance of Mr. Majendie's recent experiments, ib.; organs connected with the digestive process in animals of the most perfect order, ib.; their more immediate functions totally unknown, 113; the Author an enemy to equivocal or spontaneous generation, 114; on the respiratory function in the different classes of animals, ib.; the perfection of the voice regulated by the perfection of the larynx, ib.; remarks on ventriloquism, 115; on inspiration, ib.; the change in the colour and properties of the blood, &c. 115, 16; diminished credit of the hypothesis of Dr. Crawford and M. Lavoisier respecting the colour of the blood, and the source of animal heat, 116; the primary cause of the colour of the blood and of animal heat still unknown, 116, 17; on the diseases of the sanguineous functions, 210; the discovery of the circulation of the blood wholly due to Harvey, ib.; the transmission of the blood through the pulmonary organs, pointed out by Servetus, ib.; the proportionate parts that the heart, the arteries, and the veins take in the office of circulation still a subject of controversy, 211; remarks on this subject, ib.; John Hunter's stimulus of necessity, 212; of the blood, its colour, &c. ib.; Brande on the red particles of the blood, ib.; the average quantity of blood in the human body, ib.; on the difference between human blood and that of quadrupeds, and between the blood of different species of animals, 213; on the transfusion of blood, &c. ib.; the blood the most important fluid in the animal system, ib.; is the source of health and of disease, ib.; fever a disorder of the sanguineous function, 214; variety of opinions among the ancients and the moderns respecting fever, ib.; the Author's views on the doctrine of febrile excitation, 216, 17; on inflammation, 217; on the nervous faculty, 218; its threefold division, ib.; on the configurations and parts of the brain, ib.; the size and nerves of the brain of man, and of other animals, 219; inquiry into the particular mode of nervous agency, 220; the Author's remarks on the subject of mind, 221; on hereditary transmission and taint, 222, 3; remarks on the excernent function, 223, et seq.

Medicine, theoretical and practical, Uwins's compendium of, &c. 320, et seq.

Memoirs of Samuel Pepys, secretary to the admiralty in the reigns of Charles II. and James II., 75, et seq.

Metternich, prince, portrait of, 245, 6.

M'Gavin's protestant reformation vindicated from the aspersions, &c. of Cobbett, 367, et seq.; nature and tendency of the aid afforded to any cause by Cobbett, 367; specimen of the author's severe retaliation upon Cobbett, 368, 9.

Milner's, the late Rev. Joseph, practical sermons, 51, et seq.; remarks of the editor, the Rev. Mr. Fawcett, concerning the present volume, 51; on the happiness of those who trust in the Lord, 53, 4; the kingdom of Christ not of this world, 55, 6; reflections on a death-bed, 58, et seq.; support in death, 59, 60.

Missionaries after the apostolic school, Irving's orations for, 343, et seq.

Missions, protestant, in the Bengal presidency, queries and replies respecting the present state of, 482, et seq.

Mississippi, Schoolcraft's travels in the central portions of the valley of, 473, et seq.

Mollien's, M., travels in the republic of Columbia, in the years 1822 and 1823, 27; see Columbia.

Monk, General, his proceedings in reference to the restoration, 79, et seq.

Moore, Sir John, ode on the burial of, written by the late Rev. Charles Wolfe, 118, 19.

Mortality, table of the law of, at two different periods, 101, note.

Moscow, its repeated conflagrations, 533.

Mouravier's voyage en Turcomanie, 418, et seq.

Napier's memoir on the roads of Cefalonia, 294, et seq.; state of the island, 294; the want of roads an insurmountable bar to the general improvement of the island, and of the people, 294, 5; wretched state of the country seats, ib.; fine view from the black mountain, 295; valley of Heraclea, 295, 6; danger from exposure to the heat of the sun without using exercise, 297.

INDEX.

Newman's, Dr., manual for church members, 550, et seq.; unbaptized christians not to be admitted to church fellowship, 551; remarks on this position, ib.; the question whether female members have a vote at the church meetings considered, 551, 2.

Nishapore, its various vicissitudes and present state, 433.

Nonconformity, congregational, Fletcher's discourse on the principles and tendencies of, 363, et seq.

Norfolk Sound, on the N. W. coast of North America; school for the natives founded by the Russians, 184.

Odessa, its population, trade, &c., 548.

Orkneys, South, explored by Captain Weddell, 270.

Orme's expostulary letter to the Rev. Edward Irving, 343, et seq.

Oxus, the river, M. Mouravier's account of the dry channel of it, 438, 9.

Paradise Lost, Martin's illustrations of, 519, et seq.

Pascal's thoughts on religion, &c. translated by the Rev. E. Craig, 528, et seq.

Patriotism, lines on, by the late Rev. Charles Wolfe, 124, et seq.

Peak-scenery, Rhodes's, 88, et seq.; Dove Dale, a favourite resort of Rousseau, 89; remarks on the conduct and character of Rousseau, ib. et seq.

Pepys, Samuel, memoirs of, 75, et seq.; notice of the work by the brother of Lord Braybrooke, the editor, sketch of the life, &c. of Mr. Pepys, 77; extracts from his journal, 78; anecdote respecting Lord G. Cromwell's dissolving the house, 78, 9; proceeding of General Monk, 79, et seq.; death of Sir Henry Vane, 81, 2; remarks on the conduct of the new king and queen, 82; farewell sermons of the presbyterians, Dr. Bates and Parson Herring, 82, 3; unhappy state of affairs, 83, 4; popular opinion of the clergy of that period, 84, 5; Charles the First confesses himself convinced in his judgement against the bishops, 85; Sir William Penn, 86.

Poetry, national, its character peculiarly irreligious since the restoration, 122.

——— popular religious, remarks on the composition of, by the late Rev. C. Wolfe, 120, et seq.

——— sacred, 354, et seq.; improving state of the standard of taste, in what is called the religious world, 354; change in the character of the poetry in periodical publications, 355; Kennedy's remarks on the great importance of sacred poetry as a medium of popular instruction, 356; critique on some late selections of sacred poetry, 358, et seq.; Moore's poem on the destruction of Jerusalem, 362.

Poetry, select, chiefly on subjects connected with religion, 354, et seq.; arrangements of the poems, 358; execution of the work, ib.; see Sacred Poetry.

Poets, Latin, selections from the works of, 370.

Popery, Groser's six lectures on, 322, et seq.

Popery, the adherents of, not all of them participants of its spirit, 326.

Precipitation, mountain of, remarks upon the supposed site of, 314.

Presbyterians, their farewell sermons after the restoration, 82, 3.

Price's, Major, essay towards a history of Arabia, 440, et seq.

Proceedings of a general court-martial held at Malta, on the conduct of Lieutenant George F. Dawson, &c. 1, et seq.

Queries and replies respecting the present state of the protestant missions in Bengal, 482, et seq.

Rameses; an Egyptian tale, 337, et seq.; Egypt probably indebted to the obscurity of her history for much of her fame, 338; magnitude and complication the chief features of her architecture, 338; remarks on her sculpture and painting, &c. ib.; a view in Egypt during an inundation of the Nile, 339; detail of the leading circumstances of the tale, 340, et seq.; description of the palace of Medinet Habû, 342, 3.

Reformation, protestant, vindicated from the misrepresentations, &c. of Cobbett, 367, et seq.

Remains of the late Rev. Charles Wolfe, 117, et seq.

Remembrancer, the Christian, or the Amulet, 552, et seq.

Rhodes's Peak-scenery, 88, et seq.

Rivers of England, by Turner and Girtin, 519, et seq.

Russia, travels in, 532, et seq.; insignificance of Russia, as a European state during its early history, 532; repeated conflagrations of the city of Moscow, 533; rapid increase of the extent and population of the Russian empire, ib.; the various tribes of people that compose the population of the British and the Russian empires, 533, 4; remarkable features attaching to the circumstances that have contributed to the present aggrandizement of Russia, 534; character of its people, religion, commerce, government, &c., ib.; change in the political situation of France and of Russia, in regard to England, 535; position of Russia in a military point of view, ib.; the question whether Russia can ever become formidable by conquest considered, 536; remarks of Mr. Douglas, on the influence, &c. of Britain, in the balance of the affairs of Europe, 537; despotic kings her natural enemies, ib.; present state of Russia, in reference to the prospects of Greece, 538, 9; Dr. Lyall's charge of misrepresentation against Dr. E. Clarke examined, 539, et seq.; Dr. Lyall's 'character of the Russians' disgustingly offensive, 541; evil occasioned by the publication of Dr. Lyall's work, 542; singular and enterprising journey of Lieut. Holman, being stone blind, across Siberia, 542, et seq.; is arrested by order of the Russian government and compelled to return to Europe, ib.; Mr. Holman's explanation of his own feelings and motives in visiting foreign countries, 545, 6; his remarks on the commerce of Russia, 546, et seq.; imperial ukase, compelling the Jews, not physicians or merchants, to become agriculturists, 548; Odessa, its population, trade, &c., ib.; Dr. Lyall's visits to the Sultan Katti gherry, 549; present state of the Krimea, ib.; the Scotch missionary colony at Karass, 550; passage of the Caucasus to Tiflis, ib.

INDEX.

Russell's tour in Germany and the Austrian empire, 227, et seq.

Ryland, Dr. Hall's sermon on the death of, 511, et seq.

Saide, present state of, 312.

Schiller, Friedrich, the life of, 248, et seq.; scene of the early years of Schiller, 248; anecdote of Schiller and Dr. Elwert, when boys, 249; he unwillingly enrols himself in the Würtemburgh college, 250; publishes his Robbers, 251; gives offence to the Grisons, and is reprimanded by the grand duke, 251, 2; character of the "Robbers," 252; soliloquy of the Robber, 252, 3; of the Moor, 253; the author's remarks on his juvenile production, ib.; he secretly withdraws from Stuttgard, and becomes the poet of the Manheim theatre, 254; removes to Leipzig and then to Dresden, where he completes Don Carlos, 254; visits Weimar, and meets Herder and Wieland, 254, 5; his intercourse with Göethe, 255; publishes his history of the thirty years' war, ib.; visits his parents in Swabia, 256; general habits of his life, 256, 7; his last illness and death, 259; his literary character, ib.; inferior to Shakspeare in fancy, &c, ib.

Schoolcraft's travels in the central portions of the Mississippi valley, 473, et seq.; object of the present journey to purchase lands from the Indians, for the United States, 474; quality of the newly explored lands, ib.; striking illustrations of the blessings of civilization, 475; route chosen by the party, by way of the rivers, ib.; Indian school, near Fort Wayne, under the tuition of Mr. M'Coy, a baptist missionary, 476; Indian breakfast, ib.; the party arrive at Harmony, the late purchase of Mr. Owen, of Lanark, 476, 7; description of the town, 477; the laying out of the fields, ib.; granaries, barns, &c. ib.; the various daily labours made individual, 477, 8; remarks on the nature and tendency of Mr. Owen's system, 478, 9; striking instance of affectionate feeling in a Fox Indian, 479; conference between the party and the Indians respecting the purchase of the lands, 480: recriminatory remarks of the author on the British mode of taking possession of territory in Canada, and in Hindoostan, ib.; locality of the purchase, its climate, fertility, natural produce, &c., 481, 2.

Sermons, practical, by the late Rev. Joseph Milner, 51, et seq.

Simeon's Letter to the Right Hon. Lord Teignmouth in vindication of the British and Foreign Bible Society, &c. 185, et seq.

Society for the propagation of the gospel in foreign parts, &c. by the Bishop of Gloucester, &c. 577, et seq.

Songs of a Stranger, by Louisa Stuart Costello, 168, et seq.

Soueda, the capital of the East Druses, 148.

Southey's Tale of Paraguay, 328, et seq. comparison between Southey and Campbell, ib.; the 'Tale of Paraguay' a veritable history, 330; the story, ib. et seq.; effect of the small-pox among the American Indians, 330, 1; the birth and childhood of the Indian's first-born, 332; death of the father, 333; attachment of human nature to life, ib.; death of Monnema and Mooma, 334; reflections of Yeruti on the death of his mother and sister, 335; his own baptism and death, 336; close of the author's dedication of the poem to his daughter, 336, 7.

INDEX.

South Pole, Capt. Weddell's Voyage towards it, &c. 369, et seq.

Spain, Bowring's ancient poetry and romances of, 259, et seq.

Steam-boats established on the Orinoko, 30.

Steele's husbandman's calling, &c. 470; the author the father of Sir Richard Steele, ib.

Stowell on the Ten Commandments, 270, et seq.; the author's reasons for the present course, 270, 1; on legal preaching, ib.; remarks on the vague notion that the decalogue is not binding on Christians, 272; cases in which the Lord's name may be taken in vain in worship, 272, 3; in writings, &c., 274.

Strauss's Helon's Pilgrimage to Jerusalem, 153, et seq.

Studies of figures, by the late Thomas Gainsborough, 519, et seq.

Syria, Jowett's Christian researches in, &c. 298, et seq.

Szalt, description of the town of, 140; its population, &c. ib.; service at the Greek church, priest's dress, &c. 141, 2.

Tale of Paraguay, by Dr. Southey, 328, et seq.

Taylor's, Mrs., Itinerary of a traveller in the wilderness, 60, et seq.; design and contents of the work, ib.; the introduction, ib.; meditation on the death of the first-born in Egypt, 62, 3; personal application of the subject, 63, 4; concluding remarks of the writer, 64.

Ten Commandments, the, illustrated and enforced on Christian Principles, by W. H. Stowell, 270, et seq.

Traveller in the wilderness, Mrs. Taylor's Itinerary of, 60, et seq.

Traveller, tales of a, by Geoffrey Crayon, 6?, et seq.

Turner's and Girtin's rivers of England, 519, et seq.

Tyre, old, its ruins, &c. 312.

Uwins's compendium of theoretical and practical medicine, &c. 320, et seq.; plan of the work, 321; remarks on delusion &c. in reference to the moral acts of the individual, 321, 2.

Vane, Sir Henry, his death, 812.

Venn's remarks on the propriety of applying the funds of the Bible Society to the circulation of such foreign versions as contain the Apocrypha, &c. 185, et seq.

Ventriloquism, remarks on, 115.

Versification, Latin, simplified, by Dr. Carey, 470.

Vienna, its moral and political degradation, 241, et seq.

Views in Provence and on the Rhone, 519, et seq.

Village, the rising, a poem, by Oliver Goldsmith, 268, et seq.

Vindication of the proceedings of the Edinburgh Bible Society relative to the Apocrypha, &c. 377, et seq.

Volney, inaccuracy of his topographical descriptions, 152.

Wales, Dr. Jones's history of, 90, et seq.; curious information by the author, concerning Joseph of Arimathea, 91; Judas Iscariot the only Jew among the twelve disciples, ib.; his account of the introduction of Christianity into Britain, ib.; the religious denominations and principles of the Welsh, as detailed by this writer, 92, 3; his description of the Welsh character, 93, 4.

Wardlaw's sermons on Man responsible for his beliefs, 566; occasion of the sermon, ib.;

Walladmor, 13. et seq.; remarks on the school of Scottish novels, 13, 14; causes of its popularity, 14; Mr. Galt's fictions of Scottish life, 15; origin of the present work, 16; extracts, 16, et seq.

Warwickshire, graphic illustrations of, 519, et seq.

Weddell's voyage towards the South Pole, &c. 369, et seq.; Capt. Cooke's most southern latitude, 369; Russian expedition stopped in latitude 69° S. ib.; discovery of the South Shetland islands, 368, 9; departure of Capt. W.'s expedition for the south, 370; falls in with a Portuguese slave-ship, ib.; puts into Port St. Elena, ib.; explores the South Orkneys, ib.; his most southern latitude, ib.; anchors at South Georgia, 271; remarks a most singular internal agitation of the ground, ib.; trade to South Georgia and the island of 'Desolation' for furs and oil, ib.; he accomplishes some hydrographical corrections, ib.; seeks in vain for the Aurora islands, 371, 2; the seals, &c. of these seas nearly exterminated by the avaricious hunters, 372; atrocious conduct of some wrecked English sailors, towards an American Captain who relieved them, 373; second voyage of Capt. W., 374.

Wieland, notice of, 230, 1.

Weimar, description of it, 229, et seq.

West's journal during a residence at the Red River colony, British North America, &c. 181, et seq.; description of the colony, its population, &c. 182; their travelling dogs, ib.; the author opposed by the Canadian priests, in his attempts to circulate the Scriptures, 182, 3; refusal of the priests to marry Catholics to Protestants, 183; admission of a priest, that the Scriptures say nothing of bodily penance, ib.; a Christian church and Sunday school first founded in these wilds, 184; Russians have founded a school at Norfolk Sound for the natives, ib.

Williams, Dr. Edward, Gilbert's memoir of the life and writings of, 281, et seq.

Williams's select views in Greece, 519, et seq.

Wiffen's translation of Tasso's Jerusalem delivered, &c. 456, et seq.; remarks on the two different styles of poetry; viz. the romantic and the classical, ib.; the romantic poetry paramount in Italy in the sixteenth century, 457; different opinions of the origin of romantic poetry, ib.; opinion of Schlegel, 457, 8; character of Pindar's poetry, ib.; Schlegel on the Greek tragedy, 459; objections to his theory, ib.; influence of Scandinavian fictions on the poetry of the romantic writers, 460; Schlegel on the three unities of the French critics, ib.; and on the mythological heroes of the French poets, 460, 1; the attempt to make modern poetry classical injudicious, 461; remarks on the objections against Tasso's love scenes, ib.; and his marvels, 462; his defence of the machinery of his Jerusalem, ib.; the objection against his poem on account of its false views of the achievements celebrated, considered, ib.; character of Carew's translation of the first five books of the Jerusalem, 463; Fairfax's Godfrey of Bouillon, Hook's first canto, and Hoole's version, ib.; Cary's masterly translation of Dante, and Rose's Ariosto, ib.; merits of the present version, 464; objectionable renderings, ib.; topography of Jerusalem, 465; portrait of Armida, 466; episode of Sophronia and Olindo, ib. et seq.

Wolfe, the late Rev. Charles, remains of, 117, et seq.; the author first known publicly as the writer of the ode on the burial of Sir John Moore, 117; copy of the ode, 118, 19; song, 119; letter of the author in reference to the composition of popular religious poetry, 120, et seq.; character of our national poetry since the restoration peculiarly irreligious, 122,; profane tendency arising from accommodating sacred words to popular national airs, ib.; some instances given, 123; lines on patriotism, 124, et seq.; the author's character as a preacher, 127; exordium to the first sermon, ib.; his impressive appeal to his hearers, 128, 9; difference of feeling occasioned by the disease of the body and that of the soul, 129, 30; the various excuses made by men, for temptation, reducible to two classes, 131; first, that our particular temptations differ from those of other men, ib.; secondly, that all men do the same, ib.; observations and reflections on the above positions, ib. et seq.; biographical notice of the author, 134, et seq.; he is removed, when under two severe afflictions, to a remote curacy in the north of Ireland, 135; his religious and pastoral character, and arduous duties, 135, 6; causes of the decline of his health, 136; his habits, and increase of his illness, and death, 137.

Worship, public, different ways in which the name of the Lord may be taken in vain, during the performance of it, 273, et seq.

MVSEVM BRITAN NICVM